

Patient Solidarity Day

One voice. United. Universal.

For newsletters sent out on the day: 6 December

Today is Patient Solidarity Day!

Today is a day when we are united in our belief that all people across the world should have fair and equal access to quality healthcare. IAPO and its members are delighted to be championing this important initiative.

We have all been a patient at some point in our lives, or cared for one. Today is the day when all patients- regardless of disease or condition, geographic location, or socio-economic status- can stand together in solidarity to call for truly patient-centred healthcare. High quality, equitable and affordable healthcare; nothing more than a dream for so many people around the world. This needs to change.

It's time to stand together in solidarity to call for truly patient-centred healthcare. Every person, every patient is equal and all have the right to access the healthcare they need, when they need it. We need to unite to ensure that all people, across the world, have fair and impartial access to quality healthcare.

(Your organization's name) will be showing support by... (add details of activities planned today).

Show your support by... (add details of how people can get involved) in your activity).

Stand with us. One voice. United. Universal.

Visit www.patientsolidarityday.org for all information about the initiative, its history and how you can support.

Keep up with news and events by following @PatientSolDay on Twitter and Patient Solidarity Page on Facebook.